"When I was very young I discovered that my mother's mirrored wardrobe doors could be positioned to reflect back into each other.

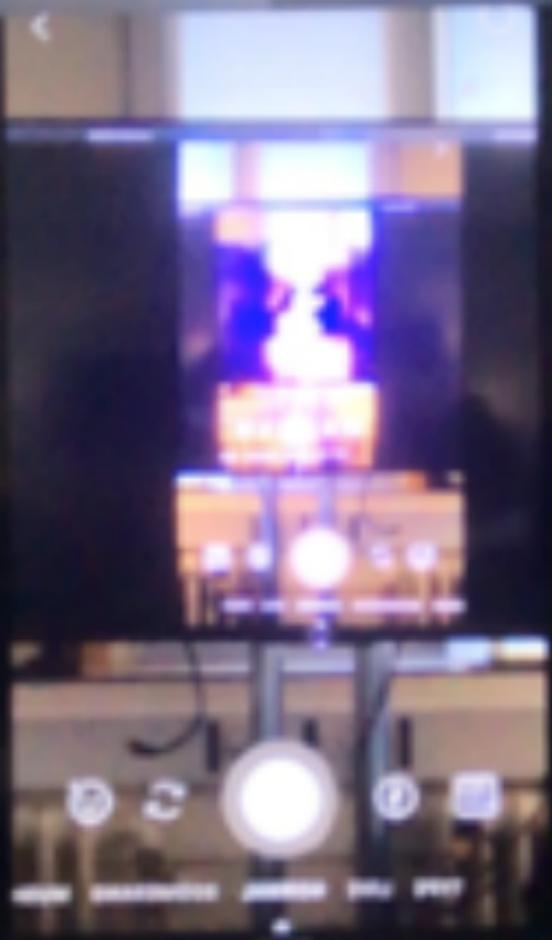

I placed my head between the mirrors and was amazed to see the chorus line of heads repeating to infinity in each direction.

I reveled in the illusion."

Dear participant,

Please follow the following instructions carefully.

On the floor in front of you, you are faced with a flowchart of words which lead to the end of the experiment.

Please start the experiment by standing on the 'START' box.

From here, you must now decide your next step. You must take the path which you think is the correct one.

Please take a sequential step to the next word of your choice, and pause here for at least five seconds. You must then decide on the next move.

Repeat this process until you reach the end of the flowchart. Pause here to find out if the route taken was successful.

The route is not prescribed, but there is only one correct sequence.

Regards,

Artist.
